I am a historian and legal scholar with research and teaching interests focused on the relationship between social movements and states in the modern world, with particular attention to class, ecology, and decolonization in Canadian, trans-Pacific, and global contexts.

I am also currently enrolled as an articulated student with the Law Society of British Columbia, working with several public interest lawyers to complete training to practice as a barrister and solicitor in British Columbia.

Practical experience as an elected official and community organizer informs my understanding of civil society, the law, and historical change: illuminating how grassroots forces at the community level influence policy and regulatory change in local, provincial, and federal governance.

Alongside work in academia and public service, I serve as principal of a professional services firm supporting clients as an advisor, consultant, writer, researcher, and editor.

J. ONLINE / WEB PROJECTS

Able to Lead: E.T. Kingsley Digital Archive < www.abletolead.ca > 2015.

This SSHRC-funded website complements the scholarly monograph I co-authored with University of Ottawa professor Ravi Malhotra, providing a digital archive of rare materials relating to the social history of British Columbia and the Pacific Northwest, including the only complete online print run of the Western Clarion newspaper and other primary documents relating to industrialization, labour relations, and social change in the early twentieth century.

Canada's Siberian Expedition < www.siberianexpedition.ca > 2010.

This Virtual Exhibition and Digital Archive engages non-scholarly audiences in the history of Canada's Siberian Expedition, a forgotten moment in the history of Canada, Russia, and the world. Fully trilingual in English, French, and Russian, it combines an engaging interpretive narrative with teaching resources and a Digital Archive that preserves and shares 2,200 previously unpublished archival photographs and documents.

Project Partners: University of Victoria Humanities Computing & Media Centre, University of Victoria Dean of Humanities, University of Victoria Special Collections, Centre for Research on Canadian-Russian Relations, Arseniev State Museum of Primorsky Region, Far Eastern Federal University Centre for Canadian-American Studies (Vladivostok).
